The 589 Ocean Ranger now features more freeboard at 730mm creating better stability and bringing the model in line with the rest of the range. The model is rated to 150hp with a 135L fuel tank and the option of adding an 80L secondary fuel tank.

The 619 Ocean Ranger Hard Top is built for fishing adventures, and includes all the features of the larger hard-top models and now offers more versatility when it comes to storage and towing. The 619 Ocean Ranger is rated to 200hp with a standard 168L fuel tank and 80L optional fuel tank. The 619 (as does the 679 and the 739) also features new sliding side windows which now slide front to back for increased air flow while also protecting you from any spray.

The entire Ocean Ranger hard-top range now comes standard with trim tabs to help navigate difficult swells or crosswinds.

Stacer's new Side Deck Water Shield now comes standard on all Ocean Rangers which allows water to run along the outside of the boat and deflects water off the bow.

There are now two seating options for the 589 and 619 Ocean Rangers: the standard box frame provides plenty of storage, whilst the optional tubular seats include an ice box. The seats have also received an upgrade: all models now receive Stacer Ocean Pro seats with standard arm rests for ultimate comfort and practicality.

Stacer National Account Manager Drew Jackson said the Ocean Rangers offer all the features necessary to bluewater fisherman.

"The new 2016 features really take the Ocean Rangers to another level, with such an extensive list of standard features you are sure to be getting value for your money," Drew said. "We have listened to customer feedback and released two brand new models so there is now a boat to suit every need, budget and lifestyle."

"One of the reasons the Ocean Rangers are so popular is the EVO Advance Hull as you can ensure a safe and reliable ride when venturing into offshore, hard-core conditions," Drew said.

Left: Considering it is less than 6m, the revamped Stacer 589 Ocean Ranger is one hell of an offshore fishing trailer boat.
